I had the pleasure of working with, and learning from, Don back in the mid-1990's at National City' Broadway-E.71st Street office. He was a true gentleman, who cared deeply for his family. He was very proud of his community and cherished the numerous organizations who benefited from his time and talents. Don taught me a great deal during the two years we worked together. He was a very patient teacher, who prided himself on serving his loyal customers. It was not uncommon for customers to wait over 30 minutes just to see Don. Although I am still with National City I unfortunately lost touch with Don when I moved out of Ohio. But I will never forget his kindness, his humor and the passion he displayed each and every day. My prayers and thoughts are with Don's family.
